

Russian Event

Stavrosian Library
Archive & Records
N.Y., N.Y.
May 15, 2022

Authorize: G. Wheaton

April 11, 2022; time 10:35pm. A temporary Russian Airstrip on the border of Russia and Ukraine was used as a heliport to fast refuel. It was manned by a small group of Russian troops. Major Petrov was in command. This small facility was on the Russian side of the border. It was not under a high level of security.

On the night of May 11th during the change of Guards, fresh young men were coming on duty with all hands on site being about 20 men. There came a roar of a jet going overhead that took center stage. All the men looked up to see a bright streak flash across the sky. As fast as that passed, another streak came upon the jet, matching speed and tracking. The craft was much bigger and out maneuvered the jet. An unusual dog fight took place. It wasn't a conventional fight. The jet looked like it was trying to fly away only to be held in place mid-air by some unseen force.

The craft began to rotate in place, the jet looked like it was orbiting the craft. The sound of roaring jet engines filled the night air, but the jet could not break free. The rotation took both crafts to ground level appearing as if it was letting go. The jet slid free of the craft. The larger craft kept rotating as it rose up into the night sky. The ground crew ran out to the jet to help the pilot. The craft moved off to the west until it was out of sight.

The pilot was taken to a security area by outside personnel and the ground crews were all replaced. A Russian news reporter tried to get the story but was refused access. Later, the reporter did get to talk to one of the ground crew still on duty in the area. (He asked that his name not be used). He told the events as he saw them and how the sound was hard on his ears as the jet was screaming. The larger craft may have made a sound, but he could not be sure as the jet made so much roaring and the night air was covered in the loud sounds.

By the next day, four men showed up in government cars, they took down everyone's name while listening to their stories. The ground crew was told not to talk about what happened. Anyone found talking about it would be jailed. The crewman felt it was important that the people knew that this kind of thing is real and that maybe we should be ready for something more.

The reporter put the story out on Russian News. It was picked up by the S.G.L. and then sent to New York for G. Wheaton. She sent it to RUFOS for the content to be shared.

The reporter was arrested after the story was published. We have no news of his fate. His source / informant was discovered to be Lieutenant Kuznetsov. He has also disappeared.

Once a story/report has been received at the library, a follow up is done to collaborate the story. After it is established as an event, the story is recorded and then issued out to groups for review.

Issued by G. Wheaton
S.G.L.
May 30, 2022

<https://stavrosianalienancestry.com/stavrosianarchives.html>